DiscountCall Provides Connecticut School of Broadcasting with a Nationwide Telecommunications Solution

Atlanta-based Telecommunications Company provides service and equipment to multi-site school

ATLANTA- (Dec. 19, 2007)- DiscountCall, Inc, a national telecommunications company, recently became the telecommunications provider for Connecticut School of Broadcasting (CSB), supplying the school with voice and data service and support at each of its 19 campuses along with phone systems and low-voltage cabling at nine campuses.

CSB is the oldest and largest school for radio and TV broadcasting in the U.S. with 19 locations, coast-to-coast. DiscountCall installed Samsung phone systems at nine of those locations, including schools in Atlanta, Boston, and Los Angeles, utilizing their nationwide network of telecommunications service providers and technicians. They also negotiated one rate for phone service for each site, a cost savings for schools located in cities where the cost of living is higher.

“Working with DiscountCall was very easy, flawless, and without issue,” said David Banner, chief operating officer of CSB. We began a pretty aggressive expansion 14 months ago and we were looking for a company, like DiscountCall, to take this part of the expansion and run with it. Randy Berlin and Rob Michael were great, and the customer service was great. They made that part easy.”

DiscountCall also installed an area code routing system. The system allows prospective students to call CSB’s 800 number from their home number and have the call routed to a CSB campus in their area code (most likely the campus of interest.) For area codes with multiple CSB campuses, calls are routed to the prefix (first three numbers after area code) closest to caller.

“We are honored that CSB has trusted us to provide them with a comprehensive telecommunications solution,” said Randy Berlin, president of DiscountCall. “As they continue to grow, we will continue to be a one-stop shop for all their telecom needs.”

About Connecticut School of Broadcasting

In 1964, Dick Robinson founded the Connecticut School of Broadcasting (CSB) in Farmington, Connecticut. Dick's love of radio inspired him to share his love with others who had aspirations in the entertainment business. CSB started with a few classes in radio broadcasting performance and production and evolved over the years to include courses in television and related audio and video editing and production. CSB is now the oldest and largest school for radio and TV broadcasting in the U.S. with 19 locations coast-to-coast.
